RUSTIC AND ANTIQUE CAMES

The charm and distinctive qualities of hand-wrought leaded windows has no doubt appealed to architects and interior decorators as a desirable decorative feature for homes and many public buildings. But the lack of artisans who can do this kind of work has precluded its use to any great extent.

It is now possible to obtain the exact effects found heretofore only in the hand-wrought comes. The soft, curving, irregular outline so much desired, as well as the hand-made surface effect, can be had in every length of Rustic and Antique Comes, with the further certainty that no two pieces will ever be exactly alike.

The Rustic and Antique Comes illustrated in this folder are the result of extensive research. They are not intended to be reproductions of any particular period of the art, but were designed with the idea of getting away from the mechanically perfect comes and to preserve the feeling and atmosphere of the old craftsmanship.

The irregularity of Rustic and Antique Comes, both in outline and surface effect, adds interest to any leaded window, no matter how simple the design. It adds motion and life to the window. And the result is a note of quaintness so desirable in any home and many public buildings.

A beautiful example of modern glazing art, illustrating increased effectiveness derived from the use of antique lead comes. Rustic comes also might have been used effectively. These comes are made by a special process by National Lead Company.

NO TWO PIECES EXACTLY ALIKE

The Rustic and Antique Comes as we manufacture them are not only interesting because of their irregularity, but because of the fact that no two pieces are exactly alike. There is not even monotony in their irregularity, every came presenting a slightly different design. The charm of hand-work and the interest that it always arouses is thus assured.

These comes add interest to the plainer forms of glazing, such as rectangles and diamonds. They soften what otherwise would be uninteresting straight lines.

Four sizes are furnished reinforced. This consists of a steel bar embedded between two hearts and milled in, making it water and airtight, and preventing any chance of corrosion of the steel bar.

The plain is a single heart came without reinforcement.

RUSTIC—Reinforced

ANTIQUE—Plain

Suggested Motifs

The five motifs shown at the top of the first page of this folder are heraldic in design. They are particularly adapted for use in stairway and library windows of the home, or in many public buildings.

The motifs on the second and third pages are mostly ecclesiastical. Simple and dignified in design, they will lend themselves admirably to use in all forms of church windows.

The designs on this page are decorative in effect. The atmosphere of quaintness and interest that these motifs will add to any home or public building has a peculiar appeal.

All of these designs can be worked up in either colored or plain glass. Either Rustic or Antique Cames can be used effectively.
